PRINCIPAL MURPHY, OF BROOKLYN,
CHARGED WITH ABUSING A PUPIL.

The Boy Wouldn't Hold Out His Hand and the Blows Fell on His Legs—Presences in Police Court for Civil Court Threatened for the Teacher—Stories Told on Two Sides of the Case.

Principal Thomas D. Murphy, of Public School No. 30, Brooklyn, which is located in Watcott street, near Van Brunt, was arraigned in Justice Massey's Police Court this morning on the charge of cruelly beating and assaulting David Burnside, eleven years old, one of his pupils, who lives at 102 Tremont street.

He had been arrested by Policeman Reilly, of the Third Precinct, on a warrant issued by Judge Massey, on the complaint of Forrester Burnside, the boy's father, who claims that his son was unjustly and brutally punished by the Principal without sufficient cause.

Both the defendant and his accuser were in court this morning, the former, not being accompanied by counsel, asked for an examination and an adjournment, which were granted him, and the case was set down for next Saturday. Meanwhile Mr. Murphy was allowed to go on his own recognizance.

Principal Murphy, who is a tall and robust young man, is about thirty-six years old. He wears a full brown beard, and his expression is neither cruel nor bloodthirsty.

"The boy," he said to a reporter of THE EVENING WORLD, "was a pupil in the first class of the primary department. He was reported for misconduct to me before last Thursday. On that day, in the morning, Miss Gillyard, his teacher, sent him to me with a note saying that he had been playing and disturbing the class and would not mind her orders. I took him in my room, after reprimanding him, till noon, and then sent him back to his class."

About 2 o'clock he was sent to me again on the same complaint, and I decided at once to punish him."

Mr. Murphy here produced a copy of the rules and by-laws of the Brooklyn Board of Education, and called attention to the rule which provides for corporal punishment. It reads:

"The discipline to be maintained in the schools shall be of a mild and parental character, and corporal punishment shall be resorted to only in cases of persistent misconduct and after failure of all other reasonable efforts at reformation. Only the principal of the school shall be authorized to inflict corporal punishment, or the necessity for which shall, in every case, be the judge."

"Do you think corporal punishment was warranted in this case?" the Principal was asked.

"Certainly," he replied, "and I am prepared to back up my claim that I acted entirely within the authority given me by the law. As soon as I read the second note I took the boy out into the hall and told him to hold out his hand."

"He refused to obey, and I whacked him across the legs with the rattan. I then repeated the order seven times, and struck him each time on the legs, after waiting a reasonable time for him to obey."

"After the third time he started for the stairs and tried to get away, but I grasped him by the collar and brought him back. The collar came off, but his clothing was not torn."

"Finally he held out his hand and I struck him twice, and then I took him into the school-room. When he sat near the other pupils he said out loud, so that the rest could hear, 'I'm hurt.' You'll see."

"I took him out into the hall again and struck him once more on the hand. Then I made him sit on the floor for five minutes. When I dismissed him he went home. He did not seem to be hurt at all, and I do not think that I acted out of the line of my duty or inflicted unnecessary punishment."

Principal Murphy added that the members of the Local Committee supported him in his action, and that this was the first complaint ever made against him.

Forrester Burnside, the boy's father, who was in court, was very indignant over the treatment his son had received. Said he:

"When I came home from my business in New York for I am in the shoe factory of G. B. Wise, at 129 West Forty-second street, last Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, I found Davie in bed."

As soon as I found out what was the matter and saw the terrible marks on his swollen legs I made him get up and go with me to the police station. The poor boy could hardly walk, and I carried him most of the way there."

"When the detectives and the surgeon, who happened to be there, examined him they all advised me to make a complaint against the teacher and get out a warrant, and I did so. It's the most cruel thing I ever heard of, beating a boy like that for so small an offense, and he only two weeks in the school. What were you doing, Davie?"

Davie said that when he was sent down to the Principal in the morning it was with another boy, and that he had been playing with a clock-wheel which he had in his pocket and had dropped on the floor.

In the afternoon another boy sitting behind him had pulled his collar and he turned around and told him to stop. For this he was sent down and punished.

Mr. Burnside, who has up to the present time lived in New York, and had brought up a family of ten children, all of whom have been educated in the public schools of this city, said that he would prefer to know of his children's bad conduct, and punish them himself. In New York he always got a letter. Davie had been to the King street school here, and had always had a good record for deportment.

The marks of the beating he received are still plainly visible and on both legs there are black and blue patches, which look as if they might have been made with a brickbat. Mr. Burnside says he will prosecute Mr. Murphy in the civil courts.

RAMAGOTE'S NEW TORPEDO BOAT.
She Will Dive Under Ironclads and Do Other Wonderful Things.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—Preparations are nearly completed for the launching of M. Ramagote's new submarine torpedo-boat at Toulon. The designer is a Government engineer and he is confident that his boat will revolutionize naval warfare.

M. Ramagote says the boat possesses all the requisites for a successful destroyer of surface war vessels. She will be able to dive beneath the largest ironclad, and an apparatus invented by M. Ramagote will attach torpedoes to the sides of an enemy's vessel, connection with the torpedoes being maintained by means of a thoroughly insulated No. 12 steel wire connected with a battery sufficiently strong to explode the cartridge.

The vessel, it is claimed, will be speedy and perfectly habitable, the reservoirs of compressed air for breathing purposes being removable at will. By means of water reservoirs the craft will be made to dive to any depth. She will be steered vertically by a double rudder working on double hinges.

From a little cupola provided with glass windows the officer in command will direct the boat. Beside this officer the crew consists of two engineers and a sailor. The machine furnishes the electricity and there are other engines for the compressed air.

LABOR'S CONVENTION AT TROY.
Political Leaders Are Anxiously Watching for the Shaping of Its Course.

A very important convention, because of the bearing it will have on the National, State and Municipal election, will be that of the labor organizations, at Troy, next Monday.

Old party managers are watching it very nervously, knowing full well that the vote controlled by it may turn the tide in November.

Just how the convention will shape itself is a matter that is causing much discussion in labor and political circles.

It has been officially announced, in the call for the convention, that its object is the repeal of the Conspiracy laws, about which organized labor complains so bitterly. That is certainly a part of the programme, but not the whole of it.

To accomplish the abolition of the obnoxious law involves an active participation in the campaign and the making of combinations, deals and bargains that will run all through the list of officers to be elected.

Republican leaders are trying hard to capture the influence of the leaders of the Troy convention and get their support for Warner Miller, but he said the large majority of them favor Gov. Hill for re-election, and propose to let the national end of the convention take its natural course.

It is thought that Warner Miller will not dare to antagonize the legislative Republican leaders who voted against the repeal of the Conspiracy law by giving their support to Warner Miller, but he said the large majority of them favor Gov. Hill for re-election, and propose to let the national end of the convention take its natural course.

The convention will sit at 10 A. M. in Harmony Hall, Troy. Isaac Wood, of Pres-men Hall No. 34, will be the temporary Chairman and Matthew Barr the Secretary pro tem.
